OBJECTIVE

I have always studied and worked in inter-disciplinary fields. I am specialized in historical contouring of Maritime Piracy and Legal Regime, Maritime Piracy in the Indo-Pacific, International Relations, South East Asia, and Indian Legal History. My research interests are Subaltern and Postmodern Discourses of Gender and Cultural Identities, South Asian Cyber Diplomacy and Regime Formation and Feminist Pedagogy. My teaching career began as a School Teacher at secondary level initially as a Trainee Teacher, under Ministry of Education, Singapore. Later on, I have taught and worked in few institutions of high repute in India. I have had the pleasure of teaching school students from secondary level to College and University students from undergraduate classes to PhD levels. I have a knack for ICT induced teaching-learning process and academic writing. My strength is ability to infuse cutting-edge pedagogies in learning. New ideas excite me and I love to venture into innovative terrains. I am keenly interested in further study and research and would love to pursue post-doctoral research on SAARC imperatives deterring maritime piracy in the Indian Ocean. I am currently developing my doctoral thesis into an academic publication.
